21.8.04 After 2 nights of rain and many pairs of wet socks. I found myself saying goodbye to the Flinder's ranges, as I walked south along the Capital brook looking at millions of years in the making. I arrive at this pictureque hut with mattresses that will tell my body to sleep in, so thanks to the people who have made this hut so cosy because this end to ender has a very warty body after hiking from Parachilna to Bowman's hut, and onward I go tomorrow with the memory of this upmost setting

The next day

Another wet sock day, but maybe tomorrow is too, so bonnyage Bowmans and thanks for the sleep

P.S

? Hi did we meet you Mt Crawfords HQ FOR CHOCOLATE BAIT SENT YOU OFF TO CAMP SAILORS TUCKER.

Considering I've already completed the Vic harbour to Cape Jervis section of the trail, I'll have to consider Crystal brook as the halfway mile stone in my journey along the Hysen track.

Keep on trekkin

Paul Adams  ☺

31/10/05 Scott McDonald + Liz Melling arrived 2pm; somewhere over 30° - a nice contrast to the wet weather we've had since Quorn.

This is walking day 27 ex Parachilna, ~~heading~~^{walking} home to Kangaroo Island. Flier are bad, but maybe it's our heavenly aroma that's the cause!

What a wonderful facility - a pity we hadn't organized a couple of rest days here to reenergise and reorganize. Thanks to those people who repair and maintain this hut/house - it's such an unexpected luxury - reading material appreciated.
